

HANNA'S MAGGIE'S FAMOUS DISHES

Recipes Which Tickled the Palates of Statesmen and Financiers—A Celebrated Cook's Interesting Career.

New York, Nov. 25.—Nowadays it would seem that the hand that makes the pudding is the hand that rules the world. In "Lucile" we were told that civilised people could not live without cooks, but Mrs. Morgan never touched on the bitter subject of the decline of cooking among civilized people. Indeed, more and more is the decline of cooking old-fashioned American cooking, that is—becoming extinct.

Take the buffalo and the Indians the American cook who makes the glory of life the taste of hot cakes housewives throughout the world is becoming extinct.

The best traditions of these famous cooks have been kept alive, however, in the person of Hanna's Maggie. For many years she was in charge of the kitchen of the family of the late Mark Hanna, and among her friends and hosts of her dinner guests spoke of her hundred voices, a true evidence of the genuine presence of the gourmet. Statesmen who had run the world, politicians, financiers who have guarded the world's affairs all have, figuratively, bowed down in worship before Maggie. Two Presidents of the United States have frequently pleaded for an invitation to partake of her delicious cookery. It is reported that J. Pierpont Morgan once kept the Senatorial hostess waiting for him for more than half an hour after the appointed time because of Hanna's Maggie's迟迟ness. Mr. Morgan waited for just over an hour for his hostess to come, thereby nearly broke off all negotiations for a most important bond deal.

President Roosevelt has time and again asked for an invitation to partake of the food selected. President was equal to Hanna's Maggie's roast beef hash. Mr. Roosevelt has even been known to break into an eloquent speech upon the subject of his hostess in the middle of a discourse upon the strenuous life. Many of his friends have said that upon the subject of this famous hostess he has shown a lack of appreciation or his undoubted oratorical powers.

The late President McKinley was another who was especially fond of Hanna's Maggie's cooking. Other Presidents who were speakers Thomas B. Reed and David B. Henderson. Senator Depew was another, as well as Joseph E. Canfield of Illinois, and John C. Linthicum, and George H. Philander C. Knox and many other famous men who were friends of Senator Hanna. In the majority of cases each of them has had a special dish named after him. Hanna's roast beef hash, which is admitted, and Maggie would frequently prepare, it for him when he dropped in to dine.

TWENTY YEARS IN FAMILY.

Maggie has been a member of the Hanna family for twenty years now. Although she has saved enough from the results of her labor to buy a comfortable farm in a sunny valley in the northern part of the State, she has not done so, and still works in Mrs. Hanna's service. When at the end of the summer Mrs. Hanna decided to spend the winter in New York, Maggie remained with the old woman. She had apartments engage at the new Hotel Gotham. In Fifth Avenue, and scarcely knew how to do with Maggie, but Frank Depew, who managed the hotel, and, accordingly came to the rescue by having her a private kitchen built away from the main. Here Maggie holds full sway and still works in the kitchen.

For Thanksgiving dinner Mrs. Hanna has turkey with stuffed chestnuts, giblet and cranberry sauce. Also, here are Maggie's specialties. Here are Maggie's directions for preparing the classic stuffing. Peel chestnuts, then carefully select and boil until meaty; then strain and boil again with onions, carrots, turnips, and the stuffing should contain nothing else.

Here is the recipe for making the mince meat of which the pie is to be composed. Beef, fat, tongue, apples, raisins, currants, and portions of orange peels and brandy.

Here is her recipe for stuffing. These are the words of the cook for stuffing for an important appointment.

Set half a pound of wheat flour into a bowl. Break in three whole eggs. Add an ounce of powdered sugar, one-half ounce of salt, a pint of milk or buttermilk, pouring it in very gradually. Continue mixing for five minutes. Butter the iron pan and add the mixture. Butter the top of the meat, and when it is browned and cut on the head and face shoulders, body and limbs—in fact every portion of his anatomy received some injury, the others being on the side of his face and head.

He was brought to the Union Depot on the same train and taken to the City Hospital. Parker immediately. He was treated by Doctor H. H. Jacobs.

DRAGGED BY A TRAIN: STILL CHEWED HIS GUM.

Farmer Rolled One Hundred Yards Under Pilot Only Slightly Hurt.

OCTOBER, 1905.—TODAY.—A young man, pilot of a swiftly moving train, and dragged over 100 yards. Harry Nichols of Marion, Indiana, was the only other injury.

When picked up by the train crew, he was still chewing some gum which was in his mouth when the train struck him. Nichols was unconscious for about four from the mill. His horses balked directly on the railroad track. Before he could realize, the wagon was struck by the Phillipsville train.

In some manner the framework of the wagon became twisted around Nichols, so that though under the pilot, he was unable to move. The train entered the station before it could stop and the man excreted.

When President Roosevelt first tasted Maggie's roast beef hash he exclaimed: "By George, this is good! Here is the way to eat it for him." Here is the way home during his absence and tell why that his hostess had sent him three chickens. Mrs. Koenigsmann gave the chickens to the cook, and then at Second Market for 20 cents. Koenigsmann will still pay double for chickens for the same.

GHOST STORIES COMPEL ACTION BY VERNON BOARD.

Railroad Crossing Believed by Aliens to Be Haunted by a Girl.

RAILROAD SPECIAL.

Burlington, Vt., Nov. 25.—Superstition resulting from the death of a young French girl at a railroad crossing at Lakeville Park has caused the State Board of Railroads to call a meeting to consider the advisability of recommending a change in the crossing. Josephine Laroche was killed in an express train this morning, two years ago. The engineers, Dennis Mahoney, 20 feet tall and weighing over 200 pounds, was completely unharmed by this his first fatal accident, and a second took place the following night. Just as the engine reached the crossing the head lights were extinguished, and the train ran into the side of the girl. When Mahoney resumed his run he could light on the engine was extinguished at the same place, and he declared he saw the ghost.

Mahoney frequently declared that he would soon meet his death in that locality and never entered the car without offering a prayer for safety. A year passed and Mahoney was left alone in the station only a short distance from the spot where the girl was killed.

Before the accident, Mahoney had a short stretch of road and the name of a ghost speed by Mahoney, an instinct was born to have the crossing changed, and a petition was presented to the Rail-road Commissioners.
